FSA Treadbike

These small but powerful machines use a liquid fuel engine to power a single central track, echoing the great Land Ships, but on a tiny scale. Squadrons of cavalry Treadbikers, often nicknamed ‘Trailblazers’, are attached to infantry units to serve in the traditional cavalry roles of scouting and shock assault. Although happy to draw their sabres when necessary, the Treadbikers generally prefer to use the twin Orlington strip-fed snub machine guns mounted on their metal steeds. 2 models per box.
